PUBLICITY SUGGESTION.

Write a letter to a librarian in the state from which your troops come, telling him about the library and about your need for books. Send it with camp library stationary to your home library and ask the assistants to duplicate the letter and send it to all the librarians in the states from which your troops come, signing your name to it with a pen.

Sample of a letter which might be written to any one interested in library work, especial use to the people of Ind. , because most of the soldiers in Camp Shelby are drawn from that State.

I wish to thank you in common with many other people of your State for the support which Ind. has given to the Camp Library movement. I feel that this is a worthy cause and that it is appreciated by the soldiers.

The Camp Library at Camp Shelby has been opened for about three and one-half weeks. It is very well patronized by the soldiers. We have in the library about 6000 volumes, one-half of which is fiction and one-half non-fiction; These books circulate very rapidly, Our daily circulation runs from 250 to 450 books. In addition to the main library we now have seventeen branches. These branches are in the various Y. M. C. A'., and K of C Buildings and also in some regimental canteens. There are about as many books in the branches and in the Base Hospital as there are in the main library. The branch libraries have been operation since early in the Fall, so you see we have been supplying the soldiers with books for some time, even before our building was begun.

March 18th begins our Nation Wide Campaign for gift books. It will last for one week. You have doubtless received some letters from our head-quarters office regarding it. My purpose in writing is to let you know something of the actual conditions in Camp Libraries in order that you may know what is being done with your books. Will you not make an effort to collect good books for the camp libraries and try to exceed the maximum plans of our head-quarters office.

There is a great call for books of fiction and good poetry. There is also a great call for technical books, high school and college text and other standard non-fiction works. It has been a pleasant surprise to us to find the soldiers so eagerly to read serious books. There has been almost as large a circulation of nonfiction as fiction. Only last week I was compelled to purchase at retail, several geometries and algebras for some of the soldiers who were preparing for special examinations leading to promotion. I believe that the people of your community have sufficient text books to supply all of our demands. You should be able to secure these for the Camp Libraries.

Press bulletins which have probably been sent to you from Washington can be used to good effect in your local news papers. Other material, letters from soldiers and etc. can be used as basis for daily news paper stories. Most of the news papers are very glad to give us publicity. You can also advertise by posters in prominent places about town and in the library.

If I can be of any direct help to you in this matter please write me at once. We shall certainly appreciate your efforts in this campaign as well as in the work which you have already done.

Very truly yours,

Copy of letter sent to the Illini

March 7, 1918.

Dear Illini,

First of all I want to thank you for sending the Illini regularly to Camp Shelby. Every day I look for it and after reading it, guard it religously till other members of the tribe get a chance to look at it. There are not many of us here but, believe me, what we lack in numbers we make up in appreciation of anything which reminds us of Illinois.

Now for business:- You probably remember the slight agitation which we made for books last fall. Well, we are out after them again. Only this time, we have some results to show and we know better what we want. For one week, March 18 to 25 there will be a nation wide campaign for gift books to be sent to the camp libraries. Illinois ought to lead the bunch in this work!

Soldiers want books. In our camp, out of a total of about 14,000 books in stock, over seven hundred are loaned every day. That means that there is a daily turn-over of five percent of our stock. Books may be kept out for two weeks. That means that about seventy percent of our books are in constant use by the soldiers! Think it over. Can the university students show anything like that?

Students have the kind of books we need. Of all the books which go out from the Camp Library, nearly half are non-fiction. The men are studying nights. Technical books, math books, French and German books,- all these are in great demand. Tell the gang to dig out the text books which they have used and set them to fighting the Kaiser. It is a waste of resources to let good technical books lie around collecting dust when our fighting men are asking for them to increase their fighting power.

Books of fiction, good literature of all sorts, biography, poetry, anything that you, yourself like to read is enjoyed also by the soldiers. If you know of books at home which the whole family has read, it will be a small bit of trouble to write home and suggest to the folks that they start them on their way to France.

And that France business is no joke either. Only today, I supplied a regiment of field artillery with fourteen hundred books, all prepared for circulation. This regiment is leaving for "Over There!" they will have a well stocked regimental library. Is it worth the trouble to you to see that every outfit which goes is equally well supplied?

Now, of course, everybody boosts his own game. That's natural. But if you want the straight dope on this business, ask the man who knows. Ask any of the twenty-some odd hundred Illinois men who are in the service what he thinks of Camp Libraries. Then when you are sure you're right, Go Ahead! Dig out the books and send them over to the University Library. The bunch there will know what to do with them.

It is just another chance to show real Illinois Loyalty; another chance to follow the Illinois boys into the fight; best of all, it's another chance to Help Get the Kaiser! Let's get together and do our damnest.

This isn't a form letter, Illini. It is a direct personal appeal for your support in a campaign which deserves the best you can give it. It is more important than Senior Exams, more inspireing than Knitting and more fragrant than the Boneyard. Remember the dates; March 18-25, one week. Make it a good one.

Yours in the Faith,

W. F. Griffin Lib.ex '19.

NOTES FROM A MORALE OFFICER

WHO VISITED SEVERAL CAMPS.

"The Camp Library to my mind fulfills one of the most vital needs of the camp. It is a place where our men can get relaxation and mental stimulus, and where they can feel at ease without the 'God-bless-you' atmosphere of the other welfare organizations."

"It is the one place in camp where you can go and have a chance to meditate or read in peace and quiet without a piano jangling in your ears or the imminent possibility of a prayer-meeting interrupting your thoughts."

"It is significant that in no camp did I detect a discordant note as regards the library work, and I can frankly say this does not accord with my observations in connection with some of the other welfare organizations. This is of course partially due to the fact that the library work is carried on in a quiet and unobtrusive manner, but more particularly to the unfailing courtesy of the library personnel and their manifest pleasure in doing even the smallest thing to further the contentment of the men."

"I believe the Camp Library is potentially one of our strongest factors for morale, and I know the majority of Morale Officers in the various camps will bear me out in this belief."

Those who are to be held in the Service indefinitely want literature which is entertaining and "which will direct their minds from military affairs" to keep them from growing stale -- "fiction and works in lighter vein."

"The second class of men however, those about to receive discharge are generally interested in books on vocational training and commercial subjects. In this work the libraries are cooperating splendidly. In this connection I do not believe the men are taking the advantage of these books they should, or which I would like to see them take. Few of them are aware of the changed conditions in the civilian world and I know it comes as a rude shock to some to find out on returning home that things have changed. In camp _____,Mr. _____ has placed a number of these books on a shelf near the door of the library where the men can obtain ready access to them. Two other mediums are offered of course for getting these books before the men; one is putting them in the barracks and the other is through the Y.M.C.A. which in several camps is conducting classes in vocational education. As this work is under the supervision of the Morale Officer he is properly the one to work through for this purpose."

"To my mind the most important function of the Morale Officer is to act as an advertising medium, so far as concerns library work. In such a camp as this where the library is not located in the civic center, a judicious and well directed advertising campaign will accomplish very commendable results. Where the building is not prominent it should be marked with signs in a very conspicuous manner, either on the roof or the side of the building; and appropriate signs can be posted in the camp directing the way."

"The Morale Officer in most camps puts out a bulletin, weekly or otherwise and intended to convey matters of interest to the command. This offers an excellent means of disseminating information on library work directing attention to new books received or those recommended as of special value."

"But the Camp Newspaper (most camps have one) is by far the best. The Morale Officer can always secure such space in this paper as he desires and should make use of inserts on various pages advertising the library and the work it is doing and calling attention to the advantages it offers. An enlisted man informed me recently that he did not even know that a library existed in Camp Blank until he saw our ad in the 'Castle' and I venture to say there are many others in a similar position. If the librarian can find time to write an occasional article either on the library work or on a matter of current interest for insertion in the paper it always serves a timely purpose."

"The librarian can be of further great help by offering pertinent suggestions as they may occur to him, either for local conditions or for general morale work; by being frank and free in his criticisms; and by being present at such conferences of the welfare agencies as the morale officer may call (once a week for example in this this camp)."

QUESTIONNAIRE ON CAMP LIBRARY PRACTICE

In preparation for the Saratoga Conference and a preliminary draft of Camp Library practice, there is urgent need for a statement from you which can be incorporated, and which may materially alter the standard statement of Camp Library practice.

Enclosed is a return envelope, and the following questionnaire provides space to make immediate reply, without need of a separate letter.

Please fill out the questionnaire within twenty-four hours, and mail it back in the enclosed envelope.

The May statistics and monthly report are desired as promptly as possible, so that a summary may be printed in the library magazines.

Note. When answer to question is fully covered in correspondence, a reference to date of letter is all that is necessary.

Name of Camp_____ Date_____

1. Size of staff (on payroll)

2. How is work organized so that responsibility for the several kinds of work is distributed among staff? Make diagram, or specify method of distribution and responsibility, including the following items:

(a) Cataloguing and preparing
(b) Supervision of Branches and Stations
(c) Reports and statistics
(d) Magazines
(e) Keeping building in order
(f) Delivery of books and magazines to branches

3. Detailed help

(a) Have you discontinued the practice of using any men for library work who would otherwise be drilling or getting other military training?

(b) What classes of men are being detailed to help in the library?

(c) Amount of such service?

(d) Effectiveness of such service?

4. Volunteer help

(a) Source

(b) Amount

(c) Effectiveness

5. Women assistants

(a) Can women be used as assistants in the Camp Library? In Base Hospital?

(b) Can suitable board and lodging be procured for them at a convenient distance from the camp?

(c) If women assistans cannot be used, state, in general, the peculiar conditions or rulings at your camp, which form thebasis for your judgment.

6. Camp Routine

(a) Are you following plan for preparing and loaning books as outlined in the 7-page Special Circular of December 7, 1917?

(b) If not, kindly describe the system in use at your camp and state briefly your opinion as to what you consider the advantage of your practice over that outlined. Kindly give specific information in regard to your method in the following kinds of work:

Cataloguing and shelf listing or other record of book stock

Have you a Card Catalog of Fiction by author?
" " " " " " by title?
Non-fiction, author cards arranged by author?

(a) Are you using the regiment or the company as a station unit?

(b) Are you using book boxes
(1) Similar to that described in diagram sent from Headquarters?
or (2) Is shelving at stations provided by camp?
or (3) What other method of shelving?

(c) Are company book cases open or closed shelves?

(d) What kind of a record do you send to stations with books?

(e) What supervision is given to the work at the stations?

(f) Do soldiers charge their own books or are they charged by the monitors?

(g) How do you get an accurate account of circulation at stations?

(h) Is record of circulation checked?

(i) How often are books at station changed?

11. Are books issued to regiments leavir camp?

Character of such books?

How recorded or charged?

(There should be monthly report to Headquarters (See Circular 11), also requisitions to replace purchased books.)

12. Magazines

(a) Are you saving any files of non-fiction magazines from mail sacks?

(b) Are these files kept on open shelves?

(c) How do you get at material in them for reference work?

(d) How many sacks do you handle a week?

(e) What proportion is discarded?

(f) Do you supply to all Branches? How often?

Where else?

13. How do you dispose of waste books and magazines?

Books Help Lick the Kaiser

"Men in camp read anything which will help them lick the Kaiser", said M. S. Dudgeon, Secretary of the Wisconsin Free Library Commission, in a talk on Tuesday morning, July 2, at the camp library symposium of the American Library Association at Saratoga Springs, N. Y.

Mr. Dudgeon is a field representative of the A. L. A. War Service, and has been librarian at the Great Lakes Naval Training Station during the past few months.

At this symposium conducted by Carl H. Milam, Assistant to the General Director of the Library War Service, several camp librarians and hospital librarians gave personal experiences in their work. Mr. Dudgeon said in part:

> "Two hundred and fifty books on trigonometry are in continuous circulation in one naval camp, because a thousand jackies are anxious to brush up in a branch which will help them navigate their ships straight toward Germany's fleet, and because another thousand are anxious to understand the trigonometry involved in pointing accurately the big guns that will hurl Kaiser killing shells into German strongholds.
> "Books which will help him to prevent a machine gun from jamming when he is repelling a vicious Hun attack, books which make a man better able toscar over the Teutonic trenches in an aeroplane, texts that teach radio signalling, reading material that will make a man a better ambulance or truck driver, the printed page that will make him more deadly in the trenches, or more healthful in the camp -- all these, the men in the camps are anxious to read.
> "The books which are useful in fitting men for the diversified activities of military and naval warfare, which will make them more effective fighters on land, on sea, in the air, or under the water, are what the American soldiers and sailors read, what they want to read, and what they ought to read, and what we as librarians must help them to read.
> "In short the American soldier and sailor is in deadly eranest and his reading shows it.""

LIBRARY WAR SERVICE

AT THE A. L. A. CONFERENCE, SARATOGA SPRINGS, N.Y., JULY 1-6.

The past year has seen the reaching out of library service to all points where U.S. men in uniform are in service, and to all war activities undertaken by the government and by civilians. The nation is occupied with a new science and industry - warfare. The accumulation and distribution to men in uniform and to civilians of all the printed facts contributing to this science constitute the new and most important service of the nation's libraries.

At the fortieth annual conference of the American Library Association at Saratoga Springs, N.Y. July 1-6, reports of this work of the past year will be presented, and plans for the future made.

Library war service in the army and navy, in the U.S. and overseas, and the war work of libraries with the U.S. Food Administration and other government organizations will be described.

Some of the important library war service features of the program are the report of Dr. Herbert Putnam, librarian of Congress and general director of the Library War Service; a camp library symposium conducted by Carl H. Milam, assistant to the director; an address by William Orr, Educational Director of the Y.M.C.A.; a report by Dr. M.L. Raney of the overseas work.

Dr. Putnam will describe the development of the service during the year, and the resources and equipment now assembled and giving book service at over 600 distributing points. Librarians and assistants from 41 large camps will be present at the camp library symposium, at which M.S. Dudgeon, formerly librarian at Great Lakes Training Station, now field representative of Headquarters, will discuss "What Men Read"; Miss Miriam E. Carey, supervising hospital librarian, will tell of service in hospitals and Red Cross convalescent houses; W. H. Brett, in charge of the Newport News Dispatch Office, and A. D. Dickinson, in charge of the Hoboken Dispatch Office, will tell how 300,000 books have been sent overseas; Joy E. Morgan, librarian at Camp McArthur, and Frederick Goodell, librarian at Camp Wheeler, will describe the intensive work in the large camps where books are available for every man; Lloyd W. Josselyn, librarian at Camp Johnston and John A. Lowe, librarian at Camp Devens, will tell of typical days in camp; Adam Strohm, librarian at Camp Gordon, will summarize the ideals and accomplishments of camp library service and lead a discussion on the topic "Is It Worth While?"

Discussions will follow all the talks, and round tables of camp librarians and hospital librarians will provide opportunity for further discussion and plans.

Other features on the program are talks by Edith Guerrier, director of the Library Section of the Food Administration; a symposium on "What Our Library is Doing to Help Win the War"; an address "What Canadian Librarians are Doing to Help Win the War" by George H. Locke, librarian, Toronto Public Library.

A Conference "Sing" will be led by Chrystal Brown, Y.M.C.A. Song Leader, Camp Lee; Carl Sandburg will read poems of the war; "The Spirit of War Literature, Poetry and Prose," will be discussed by Massee, editor of The Booklist, and George Bowerman, librarian, District of Columbia Public Library.

Arthur Bostwick, librarian, St. Louis, Mo. will give an address on "The Future of Library Work."

Check List for Requesting Books

Please indicate the number of books needed on each subject. Note that there is a chance to request a "General Assortment" on each of the main subjects. Specify as closely as you can, (adding notes of explanation) just what sort of books are needed, if the topic seems too general. Use blank lines for additional subjects or particular books.

We furnish text books for library circulation and reference use but not for class-room use. Very expensive reference books are not purchased for any camps except those in which the A. L. A. has its own representatives.

Be conservative and definite in your requests; otherwise, time is likely to be consumed in correspondence before the request can be granted.

Give the following information:

Name of camp.

Mail, express and freight address.

Kind of camp. Specify what work the units are engaged in.

Approximate number of men in camp.

What agencies are supplying reading matter and to what extent?

What local library is cooperating?

How many and what kinds of books are needed?

Where will reading matter be housed?

Who should be notified when books are shipped?

Will he arrange for the circulation of this reading matter throughout the entire camp?

SOLDIERS' SCRAP BOOKS

Suggestions to Volunteers adapted from outline issued by the Chicago Public Library.

These suggestions are issued to persons who have kindly offered to make up Scrap Books for wounded or sick soldiers too weak or ill to be physically able to hold a book, or mentally capable of extended reading.

While the following directions (which are based upon the experience in England where thousands of such Scrap Books have been made upon the original suggestion of Mr. Rudyard Kipling), should be followed as to general lines, it is expected that the individuality of each contributor will be brought out in many novel touches, which will not only add to their interest but will set each book off from all others in various evidences of a sympathetic, human personality bound in between the covers.

It should be borne in mind that the Scrap Books are for young American men, not for children. Contents should appeal to virile, active adults with wide interests and a lively curiosity about everything under the sun.

Also; they are for invalids, convalescents, far from home, in hospitals, hospital ships, and perhaps, prison camps.

Sentimental subjects calculated to bring on "homesickness" or "the blues", must be resolutely excluded on plain therapeutic grounds.

In the English Scrap Book, all references to Christmas and similar home subjects are barred.

Use colored pictures plentifully - magazine covers are good. When possible, put more than one picture on a page, breaking it up with little poems, stories, accounts of new inventions, or other facts.

The quality of paper used in the daily newspapers is such that clippings from them will probably turn yellow, or crumble away. As a general rule they should not be used. Whenever the picture has a descriptive title, do not fail to leave it on.

Leave a little border of white paper around pictures wherever possible. A backing sheet of white, with a little of the edge showing, might be laid under pictures having no margin, before pasting down. Whole pages of jokes, pictures, jingles, etc., from the magazines and the comic weeklies are good. On the other hand, subjects of serious or practical interest should not be overlooked.

Pages or clipped articles (especially if illustrated) from magazines like the Scientific American, Techinal World, World's Work, as well as good short travel articles (always with pictures) are very acceptable.

Variety should be the result aimed at, but wholesome, well balanced variety, seasoned with good taste and judgement, and due respect for the mental calibre of our prospective readers, and savored but not saturated with spices such as wit, color, and good cheer.

Pictures and stories of the war itself, while not wholly excluded, should be judiciously chosen. The bright and humorous side is always acceptable. Illustrations or accounts of engineering or military features (e.g., "the tanks") would be interesting. Going too deeply into war subjects, might, however lead to difficulties with some zealous censor. On the whole, the boys will probably be glad to see something in which war is not the main topic.

Persons with artistic ability might well add little touches with pen or brush, either by way of borders or cover decorations or entire pictures. Literary contributions would be best restricted to clipped material.

In mounting, use soft pliable flour paste, or good library paste, and use it sparingly. Mount pictures on both sides of each leaf, and on inside covers. It is a good plan after the leaves have had a little time to "set" or after the whole book has been finished, to lay each leaf between two pieces of cloth (towels,etc.) and press with a hot iron. Then lay the whole book overnight beneath a flat heavy object.

While not required, there seems to be no good reason why the maker of each book should not, if he chooses, sign his name, and perhaps address, on the last page.

Our Hospital librarians report that this personal touch adds considerable interest to the scrap books.

From time to time notify A.L.A. Headquarters the number of scrap books on hand so as the hospital needs are reported they may be filled promptly.

Suggestions for Camp Library Service

The American Library Association has been entrusted by the War and Navy Departments with the task of providing an adequate book service for the armed forces of the United States on land and sea, at home and abroad, and wishes to make certain suggestions for the administration of the book collections which it is placing at the service of our men directly with individual units, as well as through the medium of the Y. M. C. A., the Red Cross, Knights of Columbus, and Salvation Army, or under the supervision of Chaplains and other officers.

What it is trying to do is much more than merely to dump in the camps a haphazard lot of reading matter. It is trying not only to supply carefully selected books in adequate volume, but also to suggest methods for their administration which will get the utmost possible value from them by conserving them and keeping them in circulation.

The procedure outlined, while susceptible of such minor variation as special conditions demand, is the result of wide experience both in library and camp. It has been thoroughly tested, and is the simplest and easiest method of handling the books in an efficient way.

Here in France it is especially necessary that these suggestions be carefully followed. Tonnage is scarce and books precious; it is therefore the duty of everyone concerned in their administration to see that they are not carelessly or wantonly treated.

No barriers should be raised between the men and the books; no deposit should be charged; but the men should be impressed with the idea that, to play square, they must return all books promptly and in good condition. Experience has shown that no system is as successful as the honor system, when properly applied.

To some, the following suggestions may seem needlessly detailed; but the purpose has been to make them so explicit that they could not possibly be misunderstood.

A.L.A. books are shipped in special units, which may be stacked together after the fashion of a sectional book-case. Each unit holds about sixty books, and each volume is equipped with a book-card and pocket, so that it may be issued without further preparation:

EXCEPT this one small detail: In every lot of books there may be some duplicates. It will be necessary to get together all the duplicates in the allotment for any one point, and number them "Copy 1," "Copy 2," and so on. The book-cards must be similarly numbered, in order that it may be possible to tell when a book is returned, which card belongs to it. Or, if preferred, all the books in the collection may be numbered consecutively, the number being placed on the inside book-cover above the book pocket and also on the card, which will serve to bring book and card together whenever there are duplicates. If it was possible to do this work in advance, it would be done for you; but it is not possible, as no one can foresee how the units will be combined.

1. The principal object of every recording system is to indicate who has each book and when it is due. In the camp library system, this is accomplished by means of a book-card, which will be found in a pocket on the inside back cover of every book. It bears at the top the last name of the author of the book, and the book's title. Beneath are spaces for the name of the man drawing the book, the organization to which he belongs, and the date upon which the book should be returned.

2. In issuing a book, take the card from the pocket, and enter the man's name and organization, together with the date. Keep the card and hand the book to the man, who, of course, has seen the entries made and therefore knows there is a record against him. (It is often feasible to permit the men to make their own entries and simply pass in the cards. Certainly it is better to permit this than to have the books tied up because there is no one to fill out the cards.)

3. At the end of each day, gather together the cards for the books issued that day, arrange them alphabetically by author, and put them in their proper places in the card file. It takes but a few minutes to do this, and it will be found a great timesaver, because when a book is returned, the card which belongs to it can be found in an instant.

In order to keep the cards in proper shape, it will be necessary to have a tray and set of guide-cards. They cannot be furnished at present, and the person who administers the books must devise them. The cards are 3″x5″ and must be filed on end; the tray which holds them, therefore, should be about 3¼″ wide, 3¼″ deep, and 8″ long, inside. A perfectly satisfactory tray can, with a little ingenuity, be made from a cigar-box. A three cornered block behind the cards will keep them upright. Guide-cards should project ½″ above the book-cards, and should bear on the projections letters A to Z.

4. When a book is returned, look at the author's name, find the proper book-card in the file, check off the date with a pencil, return the card to the pocket and the book to the shelf. The transaction is complete.

5. The time limit will depend somewhat upon the character of the camp. For the present, it is recommended that the standard period of issue be one week, with privilege of renewal for a similar period. This renewal privilege should ordinarily apply only to technical books, or books of serious character: it should seldom apply to fiction.

6. Every week, then, it will be necessary to run through the cards and pick out those belonging to books which have not been returned on time. There are various ways of getting these books back. A list may be turned over to the top-sergeant of each company, provided the commander's permission has been secured; over-due notices may be sent directly to the men with their mail; a list may be posted on a bulletin-board. In one camp, the Adjutant issues a notice the first of every month reminding the men to return all books which may be in the barracks. It is for the local administration to choose which method shall be followed—but it should be remembered that this is the crucial test of the system. If it does not get the books back, it is a failure. And in just the degree that it succeeds in getting them back and keeping them in circulation, it is a success.

7. In every shipment will be found placards which should help to get them back. They should be posted conspicuously above the books. There is also a supply of cards and pockets to be used in replacing any which are lost or worn out, and also in providing all the books already on hand with an equipment similar to that in the A.L.A. books, so that all books may be administered in the same way. A further supply of cards and pockets will be furnished upon request.

8. It has been the custom in many places to require the man taking out a book to make a deposit of two or three francs, to guarantee its return. The American Library Association is firmly opposed to this practice. It feels that no such barrier should be erected between the men and the books; if such a barrier is necessary, it is because the administration is at fault. The honor system will unquestionably succeed with the right sort of helpful supervision, and where proper care is taken to make the men understand just what is expected of them.

9. No stipulation is made with regard to reports, but the A.L.A. is glad to receive reports of circulation (based upon the number of cards filed each day, which should be counted at the time they are alphabetted), as well as news of every sort about its book service. "Human interest" stories are especially valuable, because they can be used at home in asking for fresh book donations.

Besides fiction and general literature of a lighter character, such as is included in all the boxes, the A.L.A. is ready to provide, as far as possible, special technical books dealing with military subjects. It welcomes requests for special books to fit special needs, and is trying to build up at its Paris headquarters a reservoir collection from which all such requests may be promptly filled.

It also welcomes suggestions for the improvement of its service and information as to places where books are needed. Its technical knowledge is at the service of everyone requiring it; and it hopes that its Paris headquarters, 10, Rue de l'Elysée, will become the place toward which all members of the A.E.F. who are interested in books will naturally turn. A well equipped reading room is maintained there; for those engaged in research along special lines, the services of a trained reference librarian are available: lists of books on special subjects may be consulted, and in many cases the books themselves examined. If a visit in person is not posible, a mail inquiry will bring prompt response.

RRY CALL FOR BOOKS

A. L. A. War Service Must Have Another Half Million Volumes at Once.

Overseas representatives of the A. L. A. cable that three quarters of a million more books must be sent to them at once if the actual need for reading matter among American soldiers is to be met.

After all available books, including possible purchases and books from closing camps have been computed, there remains a shortage of nearly half a million volumes. These must be obtained as gifts.

Many of the two and a quarter million books that have been sent over have been worn out, or lost through the exigencies of war and transportation. The communications printed here show that the condition is not overstated and that the need is urgent.

Cable received January 16th from Burton E. Stevenson, European representative:

"Demand for books unbelievably great and supply inadequate; rush all possible shipments."

Cable January 16th from Dr. Herbert Putnam, General Director, now in Paris:

"Need most urgent for plentiful supply miscellaneous fiction, nonfiction, buy freely, hasten shipments."

Letter from Mr. Stevenson, January 22nd:

"* * * I have already cabled you two or three times concerning the unprecedented demand for books, which are now pouring in upon us. I trust that shipments will be made as large as possible and that no attention will be paid to tonnage limitations. * * * All of our departments here at headquarters are going full steam ahead. The only discouraging feature in the situation is that our supply of books is lamentably small. Two weeks ago we had over 2000 cases at the warehouse. Today, there are less than 200 cases of miscellaneous books available for distribution. Kerr is out this afternoon seeing if he can pick up ten or fifteen thousand books in the Paris market to tide us over until a further shipment arrives from America."

Cable received February 7th from Mr. Stevenson:

"Rush all possible fiction and miscellaneous shipments."

Letter from Mr. Stevenson, February 13th:

"You will be distressed to know that for the past ten days we have had practically no miscellaneous books available for distribution. We have purchased 15,000 copies of Nelson fiction here in Paris, which we are having prepared as rapidly as possible, but this will be, of course, merely a stop-gap. Our service, away last April, started off with this Nelson fiction, but I never expected to have to return to it. The demand for miscellaneous books was never as great as it is now, and we should strive to meet it in every possible way. It is a disappointment to know that the result of your December appeal was so unsatisfactory. I surely trust that you will continue to make the appeal in the larger cities of the United States and try to get it through in some way to the people that the men over here need books more now than they have ever done. It will be at least six months, perhaps a year, before we shall dare to slacken our efforts in this respect."

Cablegram from Dr. Putnam, February 18th:

"Urge everything possible to stimulate book and magazine donations. Need never greater than present. At least million more fiction and miscellaneous books demanded within next six months to maintain army morale."

Letter from Mr. Stevenson, February 27th:

"* * * We are going to need, between now and next July, at least three-fourths of a million more of miscellaneous books. Many of these can be secured, I hope, from the camps that are closing up in America; and I trust that you will concentrate all your energies on getting these books through to us as rapidly as you can. The demand for miscellaneous reading matter is tremendous, and it will probably interest you to know that as a result of the advertisement we had last Friday in the "Stars and Stripes" our yesterday's mail consisted of at least 1200 letters from men, asking for special books. I am looking for this deluge to continue, and we are struggling to get our Mail Department large enough to deal with it promptly."

Cable received March 15th, from Mr. Stevenson: "* * * Maintain gift and camp library miscellaneous and fiction shipments largest possible."

Extract from letter from H. T. Dougherty at Brest, March 5th:

"At the present time there are in this district some 70,000 men and considerably less than 7,000 volumes. Since I have been in Brest, but one shipment of books has gone through, and from this I snitched 14 out of 39 cases. All other book-bearing ships have gone to ports south of Brest. This is unfortunate for me, and especially for the men here. If you could be at camp as frequently as I am and hear the oft-repeated call for books—well, you would probably be able to get some somewhere. If you know where that where is, I wish you would shoot along that information. It seems to be my lot to get into territory where books do not grow. You may remember that in Texas it was necessary to conduct a campaign before I could start a library. Here a campaign is out of the question, but I rely on you fellows back in the states to send a few. Every few days I take a trip to the wharves, examining the cargo manifests of every incoming steamer, but with one exception have never found a thing. The men there must think it a myth that the A. L. A. actually deals in books.

On February 28, the library building at Pontanezen was started, and I wired Paris Headquarters that I was ready for books and help. Back comes word that they are sending me 50 cases (3,500) when I hoped it would be about 400 cases,—which I knew they did not have.

Extract from letter from Blanche Galloway at Brest, March 21st:

"There are 60,000 men in that one camp, and three other camps and two large hospitals crying to be served in this neighborhood. We are giving them all a little, and hoping for more books to serve them better."

Extract from letter from Esther Johnston at Le Mans, March 3rd.:

"To make obvious the opportunity and possibilities for the A. L. A. here, I might say that as to the American Embarkation Center, it's the biggest camp in France, with from 200,000 to 300,000 men camped within its area of 100 square miles. There are innumerable camps, more or less isolated,—the Forwarding Camp the largest,—while in Le Mans are the headquarters with a constant flow of men from the adjacent country.

"The book supply is woeful,—there isnt' nearly enough material, and requests coming from every side. Men who have not seen books for eighteen months, who have been in trenches at the front until they came to the deadly monotony of their muddy camps at Le Mans, are without books still. Their officers plead for boxes of books, while the best that can be furnished for the present is a sop of two or three. At a rough guess, about 18,000 books have been distributed over this area, many of which have disappeared with the men who broke camp suddenly.

"Now the Paris office is sending a good many boxes down to us, fiction and technical; but our library will be very meagrely equipped when we open. I hope there will be a constant flow hereafter.

"This explanation, written in the midst of many interruptions from muddy, tired and bored doughboys, is because we've heard rumors of a let-down in the sending of books from America. I think it's probably untrue for we hear all sorts of rumors; but you will know, and if there's a project for stopping the sending of books, I know you'll put in a strong "word."

April 191[illegible].

So many inquiries have recently been addressed to this office regarding the final disposition of the books after the close of the Library War Service, that it is impossible to write a separate letter to each inquirer. The situation is this:

The War Service Committee of the American Library Association is giving careful consideration to this subject; their desire being that the first choice be given to the War and Navy Departments for a continuing library service to the men in the army and navy respectively. If books remain after these needs have been met, it is very possible, in fact probable, that the Committee will consider favorably placing the books in certain communities not possessing libraries or library facilities, especially communities in the South and South-West, these being portions of the country which have the fewest libraries.

For the present, all the books available are needed for soldiers and sailors. Only recently Dr. Putnam, Librarian of Congress and General Director of the Library War Service, who is now in France, cabled us that at least a million more books and magazines should be sent over within the next six months. There are a full million and a half soldiers still in France and they are demanding books for study and recreational reading more insistently than ever before. Consequently any consideration other than for the use of the soldiers and sailors must be deferred. In the meantime we are holding for the War Service Committee your request and others of like nature.

Very truly yours,

GEORGE B. UTLEY

To the Camp Librarian:

The enclosed "Hurry Call" explains the urgency of the present need for more books.

We believe that most of the large Camps can spare a few thousand volumes without crippling the work too greatly. Mr. Charles A. Read, who has had a year's experience as Librarian in several Camps, has just been appointed Field Representative. Mr. Read has spent several days at Headquarters reading the appeals for books that have been sent in from our Paris Office. We are sending him out to interview the Camp Librarians, to explain personally the need as shown in the overseas letters, to go over the book collections at each Camp in company with the Camp Librarian, and to arrange with the Camp Librarian for the shipment to Dispatch Offices of whatever can be spared from the Camp collection.

Do not infer from this action that Headquarters minimizes the work in the U.S. Camps. We realize that the home work is more important than ever during the remaining months, but where a Camp of 20,000 or 30,000 men in the United States has a collection of 20,000 or 35,000 volumes, an army of 300,000 men in France has only 50,000 or 75,000 books available.

We are confident that you will consider this from the point of view of the work as a whole and do your best.

Very truly yours,

MALCOLM G. WYER

To the Library War Service Worker:

You have a story to tell, based on your experience in the Library War Service. Aspects of the work, as you have seen it in camps or hospitals or overseas, may provide the material for a magazine or newspaper article. Your local newspaper would assuredly be interested in an account such as your return from the service would afford an occasion for giving. It would be likely to receive attention even if you have been back at your peace-time duties for some time. If you are still in the field, a letter to your newspaper will help to create interest in public library service.

While the work of the Library War Service is closing, the work of the American Library Association will go on. There is a big field for the A. L. A., and in order that we may be trusted to meet the opportunities which lie ahead, the public must know of the service we have already rendered. Every article about library work, whether it deals with the war service or with the larger peace-time aspects, will help to bring a general realization that an adequate nation-wide public library service is vitally necessary to the development of the nation.

Will you not aid in creating such public sentiment, through whatever medium of publication you wish? Whether the publication has a general or local circulation, utilizing it will win for us needed support.

Very truly yours,

GEORGE B. UTLEY,

Executive Secretary.

Subject: Library War Service to the vessels of the Fleet.

1. According to his report, Mr. Harold Wooster, representative of the American Library Association was able to be of some service in providing your ship with books and magazines during the period of maneuvers at Guantanamo Bay. For your information, a list of the magazines for which subscriptions have been authorized appears below. They will begin with the May number and continue for six months. In case of unnecessary delay or failure to receive these periodicals, notice should be sent to this headquarters.

2. Mr. Wooster will be at New York during the visit of the Fleet. His assistance and the resources of our dispatch offices are at your service. We would suggest that the A.L.A. books on board which have been read and re-read, or which have proved unsuitable, should be exchanged at New York for a new collection. If possible it would be well to visit the dispatch office at 411 Third Avenue, Brooklyn, and select from the stock such books as the officers and crew of the ship need.

Very truly yours,

Assistant Director.

DEPARTMENT OF THE INTERIOR
Bureau of Education

EDUCATIONAL WORK IN THE TRAINING CAMPS.

Educational classes in the army camps form an important part of the work of the Committee on Training Camp Activities. This work is maintained with the help of local committees. One of the way in which these local committees are cooperating most effectively with the camp forces is in the securing of teachers of French and other subjects. The men are eager to prepare themselves for the time when "somewhere in France" they will meet the men with whom they are to fight side by side. The War Recreation Boards in many cities are making this possible by providing teachers not only at the camps but in the communities. Atlanta, Ga., for instance, is furnishing French teachers for the Y. M. C. A. educational director at camp; Burlington, Vt., Charleston, S. C., Chicago, ILL. (where a five hour trip is involved for the teachers going to Highland Park,) Indianapolis, Ind., Pensacola, Fla., San Francisco, Cal., Spartanburg, S. C., Minneapolis and St. Paul, Minn. and many other cities are performing similar services. In Alexandria, La., a grammar school has been opened in the evening for classes in French and History. In Chattanooga, the Board of Education is attempting to supply the educational material necessary for the 300 men enrolled in classes in camp, many of whom can neither read nor write. Three hundred fifty arithmetics sent to the War Recreation Board by the American Book Company of Cincinnati are being put into excellent use at camp.

The University of South Carolina at Columbia is giving courses in French, History, Mathematics and Topography, at a nominal rate. Saturday night lectures are being given at the base hospital at Camp Cody by teachers from Deming High School. This school will be open evenings for classes in French, Spanish, Mathematics, Science and History. The educational work for the men at Fort Bliss has been taken over by the President of the University of Texas, who has assigned five university instructors and three volunteers to the work, the army providing transportation to the camp for the instructors. Two thousand men were enrolled in the classes. At Macon, Ga., an educational course has been arranged giving high school and college credits.

The men at the Navy Yard, through the courtesy of organizations in Philadelphia, are having instruction in automobile mechanics, electricity, typewriting and surveying, as well as in academic subjects. The Universities of Wisconsin and California are sending instructors to the nearby camps.

Closely allied to the educational work at the camps and in the communities is the movement which has spread rapidly through all the camp cities to collect books and magazines for the men in camp for use at the Y.M.C.A.recreation huts, the base hospitals, the barracks and in many instances in the khaki clubs in the communities. In all of this work the city libraries have been most helpful in acting as clearing houses and in sorting and grading the books before they are sent to camp. The libraries of a number of cities are throwing open their facilities to the soldiers on Sunday afternoon and in the evenings when the men are in town. Many of them have established branch libraries at the camps.

Many interesting plans have been devised for collecting the books and arousing the interest of the communities in the project. In El Paso the Boy Scouts helped in collecting the books which were catalogued by the public library in units of one hundred. At Nogales, Ariz., boxes were placed in various parts of the city where contributions might be made regularly. Atlanta and one or two other cities made use of laundry wagons which gathered up the books as they made their collections. The hotels were asked to gather up the magazines left by their guests. Through the school children of Augusta, circulars telling of the movement and providing reading matter for the soldiers, reached the homes of the city. The Girl Scouts were active in helping to gather the material. The local committee of Dayton secured a large collection of technical and mechanical magazines through advertising agencies. The public library of Washington undertook the task of supplying with books and magazines all nearby camps, soldiers' clubs, rest rooms and detached guard stations. Moving picture films were used as a medium of appeal for reading matter.

Notes from the Camp Library, Camp Funston, Kansas
Maintained by the American Library Association

Do Soldiers Read?

"Damned if this isn't civilization!" was his parting remark to his companion, after the two of them had looked around the new Camp Library building at Funston, read magazines awile, enjoyed the comfortable chairs, and checked out a book apiece.

On the evening of January 2, two men in the "Engineers' Camp" had, between them, Hall's "Kitchener's mob" and Victor Chapman's "Letters," both books from the Camp Library. Each man read his book through, then exchanged with his friend. They read in the barracks till lights were out, then went to the company bath-house, where lights burn all night, and read till 11:30 p.m. and 4:00 a.m., respectively. Both men read both books through.

Ian Hay Beith's "First hundred thousand" was read at one sitting by a man comfortably tipped back in a Windsor arm-chair against the book shelves. He read right through the formal speeches at the library "opening."

Y.M.C.A. Number 10 'phoned to the library that additional copies of the novels of Harold Bell Wright, Winston Churchill, John Fox, Jr., and also "David Harum" and Hepsy Burke" were in demand. Two copies of each were sent promptly.

The poetry of Riley and Kipling is specially in demand at Y.M.C.A. Number 1, at Fort Riley. The library has filled several requests for more copies.

The six copies of Mr. Gerard's book, "My four years in Germany," are always out. Empey's "Over the top" (15 copies) is always in use. Coningsby Dawson's "Carry on" is another favorite. The American Library Association War Service headquarters, at Washington, is supplying additional copies for use at Funston.

A few sample requests received at the central library: Wireless telegraphy. Explosives. Veterinary medicine and surgery. Oscar Wilde's plays. Geography (especially maps and atlases). Cipher codes and de-ciphering manuals. Steam engines. How to make and read maps. Trigonometry. Calculus. Homer's Iliad and Odyssey (in the original). Spanish easy reading. Life of Stonewall Jackson. Chemistry. Bacteriology. Liebknecht on Militarism.

A Camp Library in a Blizzard

On January 10,11, and 12, Camp Funston was visited by a Kansas "blizzard," with intense cold. The library was kept quite comfortably warm, and had an average attendance of visitors. Following are a few notes from those days:

Maeterlinck's "Wisdom and destiny" was asked for and searched for in vain (since then, received from A.L.A. headquarters.) The man had read it in part at home, wanted to finish it in camp. He has been notified that the book is now available.

A dozen or fifteen pages of concise, up-to-date (1917) information on meningitis in its various forms was furnished another inquirer, thanks to a good lady of Manhattan, Kansas, who had given the library a relative's medical library.

Another man, a drafting designer in civil life, wanted something on his specialty, because "a fellow forgets all he knows." Thanks to someone in Kansas City, the library furnished him with a volume of the I.C.S. series, exactly on his subject. He had never seen it before. He went away happy.

The educational secretary from Y.M.C.A. Number 5 came in on one of these days to get all possible textbooks in grammar, spelling, arithmetic, algebra, geometry, trigonometry, physical geography, civics, and history. The library was able to give him something on every subject. He has classes in many of these, but rather more individual students pursuing their own studies.

Another Y.M.C.A. educational secretary was in during the blizzard, asking for help in organizing a class in Decimal filing of government correspondence, for the Quartermaster and other departmental clerks.

Another 15° below zero visitor brought a friend, seeking a Pitman or Graham shorthand instruction book. "He can pick it up right off with a little help from me and a book." But the library had only Eclectic and Gregg books.

Robert Service's poems were the quest of the educational secretary of "Y" Number 7 on this cold day, for some of his men. He has had a steady demand for poetry. He carried the books back with him.

On the morning of January 12, with the thermometer at 20° below, the camp was further frozen with horror at the bank robbery and murder of four men the night before. One of the first visitors at the library was an officer, a member of the investigating commission." He wanted a book to read, "not too heavy, but something to occupy my mind." He took away a Rex Beach.

On one of these mornings the librarian prepared and served coffee to the several temporary soldier assistants. "Say, boy! this sure ruins what they call coffee at our mess!" was one response.

Formal Opening of Library

The library building at Camp Funston was formally opened on Saturday afternoon, January 5. About 150 guests were present, including officers and men, representatives of camp activities, and about thirty visiting librarians. On behalf of the American Library Association, Mr. Purd B. Wright, librarian of Kansas City public library, described the war service of the association, told of the beginning of library service at Camp Funston and Fort Riley in July 1917, and handed the key of the building at Lieut. Richard B. Foster, chief of the Department of Camp Activities. Lieut. (now Captain) Foster accepted the building and its equipment and service on behalf of the camp authorities, welcoming the contribution of the American Library Association to the contentment and inspiration of the men and officers. Tea was served monthly "visiting day." The staff is grateful to Mrs. Willis Kerr, Miss Mary Alice Whitney, Miss Grace Leaf, and Miss Louise Jaggard, all of Emporia, for their generous assistance in the preparations for the "opening."

The Library Building

The new library building at Funston is 40x120 feet in size, and very attractive in exterior and interior. It was completed by the contractors on Wednesday, December 19. Work at the former library working quarters (in the store-room of the Y.M.C.A. headquarters) had been suspended since Thanksgiving, all books and magazines being delivered to the library building. By December 20 there was an accumulation of more than sixty cases of books and twenty tons of magazines. Between December 20 and January 4, the librarian and assistant (Messrs. Kerr and Clayton), assisted by Floyd McNeil and Glenn McPheron, student assistants from the Emporia Normal library, and several soldiers "detailed" by the camp authorities for library service, opened and sorted the books, sorted and bundled and distributed or stored the magazines, installed the living room equipment (two rooms and bath at one end of building), received and put into daily use the library's Ford auto truck, received and unpacked the building equipment of chairs and office desks, washed the windows, and put up the window draperies.

The staff is grateful to Misses Irene Gentry and Helen Read and Mrs. Gentry, of the Kansas City public library, for their prompt and generous help in making up the cretonne side draperies and valence for the windows. The draperies add an attractive bit of color (rose and tan) and a reminder of home very much appreciated.

The equipment of tables and charging desk was received January 14, and at last the building was complete -- except the oiling and staining the floors, installing storm windows, erecting the outside electric-lighted sign ("LIBRARY" in letters two feet high), putting a ceiling over the living rooms, painting the exterior, and building the garage and magazine store-house, most of which exceptions have now been completed. But the building has been in hourly use by officers and men since December 19 and even before that. The attendance is growing daily. Hours of opening have been fixed from nine a.m. to nine-thirty p.m., daily.

Books

Approximately 20,000 volumes are in the central building and branches. These constitute a strong collection of good all-round non-fiction and fiction, including a remarkable number of late publications in all lines. The purchases from the American Library Association War Library fund are arriving almost daily, and are being put into immediate circulation, as the selection is exactly what is wanted.

Further donations of books from citizens, through their public libraries, are needed. Any sound clean book is useful. Textbooks of all grades, from primers and spellers up to university texts, are in great demand, so long as they are whole and clean and fairly recent in publication. Old religious books cannot be used. Magazines of date before [illegible] except certain titles, concerning which correspondence is invited. Ship by freight, prepaid, addressing to Camp Library, Camp Funston, Kansas. Notify the library. If government bill of lading is wanted (on which the government pays the freight), apply to the library, stating number of boxes, weight, and initial carrier.

Branches

Twenty-one branches are in operation, each with from 200 to 1500 books. These branches are in the 12 Y.M.C.A. buildings, 4 Y.W.C.A. Hostess houses, 3 Knights of Columbus buildings, Kansas regimental (353rd Infantry) building, and the Junction City Community building. Additional branches and distributing stations will be opened and served from the central building by the library automobile truck. Magazines and newspapers are delivered several times each week to branches and to the hospitals, infirmaries, and detention camps.

Reading Aloud

An occasional hour of reading aloud is being tried. The first of these was on Sunday afternoon, January 6, by Mrs. Willis Kerr, of Emporia. No effort was made to advertise the reading, a group of men voluntarily gathering at one corner of the reading room upon announcement. Mrs. Kerr read from Joningsby Dawson's "Carry on," Robert Service's "Rhymes of a Red Cross man," and some from Vachel Lindsay. One testimony was, "Mrs. Kerr, that was just like home."

Staff

Willis H. Kerr, Camp Librarian, is loaned to this work for part of each week by the Kansas State Normal School, at Emporia, where he is librarian. He travels to Funston and back each week. Herbert V. Clayton, Assistant Camp Librarian, is loaned for part of his time by the Kansas State Library, at Topeka, where he is the law librarian. Floyd McNeil, of Kansas City, is the permanent paid Assistant Camp Librarian (Messrs. Kerr and Clayton receiving only travel expense and subsistence). Private Ferdinand Henke, Co. D, 314th Engineers, is detailed for library service, and is in charge of the branches. Private Fred R. Yoder, Co. E, 356th Infantry, is detailed for library service, and is the library's educational representative in cooperation with the Y.M.C.A. and other educational classes. Private Clifford Keller, Co. K, 354th Infantry, detailed to the library, is in charge of the classifying, shelf-listing, and mechanical preparation of books. Privates Henke and Keller were for several years members of the staff of the St. Louis public library; while Private Yoder has had graduate work at Wisconsin and Missouri and has taught several years.

Dear Friends:

While in the Army, I made good use of the Camp Libraries and do appreciate ever so much the service your Association men gave me. After the armistice was signed I visited the Library practically every day until discharged and was able to study and complete plans for my life-work. I have nothing but praise for your grand work.

The War Camp Community Service friends inform me that if there is not a public library in a fellow's home town, that we should write to you friends. There is no Library here and would like to inquire if it would be possible for me to procure special books that I want from time to time. I would not care for a general selection but is there a way in which I can secure a copy of a special book at any time? I would be glad to pay for such a service and will appreciate any information you are able to give me.

Respectfully yours,
